HUMILITY: PUTTING OTHERS FIRST BY GIVING UP WHAT YOU THINK YOU DESERVE

REMEMBER THIS:
"Don’t do anything only to get ahead. Don’t do it because you are proud. Instead, be humble. Value others more than yourselves."
PHILIPPIANS 2:3, NIRV

SAY THIS:
PUT OTHERS FIRST BECAUSE JESUS PUT YOU FIRST.

DO THIS:
PUT OTHERS FIRST BECAUSE JESUS PUT YOU FIRST.

Some people just seem harder to love than others. But we are all made by God, in His image every person matters to Him. That means that we are called to love everyone. But you don’t have to do it on your own. God can give you His love, even for those people in your life who are hard to get along with. Pray that God would help you to show love to the difficult people in your life.

Some people just seem harder to love than others. But we are all made by God, in His image every person matters to Him. That means that we are called to love everyone. But you don’t have to do it on your own. God can give you His love, even for those people in your life who are hard to get along with. Pray that God would help you to show love to the difficult people in your life.

WEEK THREE
SERVANT PRINCIPLE • PHILIPPIANS 2:3-8
HUMILITY WINS

By Mike Jeffries

Anyone who ever played for UCLA Basketball Coach John Wooden, one of the greatest coaches of all time, knew that he was more about building character than he was about winning basketball games—although he did both pretty well. His teams won ten championships during a 12-year period, the final one in his last year of coaching in 1975.

He was famous for his “pyramid of success,” fifteen different elements like “competitive greatness” and “teambwork.” But Wooden said one quality was more important than all the rest and made the rest possible: unselfish humility. Wooden would tell his players: “Talent is God-given. Be humble. Fame is man-given. Be grateful. Conceit is self-given. Be careful.”

Be humble. Be grateful. Be careful. Sounds like he had the balance between ego and humility down pretty well.

David Marcum and Steven Smith, in their book Egonomics, echo Wooden’s sentiment that unselfish humility is the foundational quality for every other step to success. In their book they state, “As a trait, humility is the point of equilibrium between too much ego and not enough.” It’s the proper tension between a discouragingly low self-esteem and exceedingly high self-confidence.

In a book written for the business world, they make a good point: “As an indispensable trait of great leadership, humility must make its way past the pulpit of Sunday sermons and into the cubicles and boardrooms. Humility should be our first reflex.”

Of course, on our children’s playgrounds, humility looks a lot different than it does in a workplace, a church, or even a college basketball court. As we explore this idea of humility with our kids, we show them humility doesn’t mean getting stepped on or kicked around, or looking down on themselves. “Humility is not the equivalent of being weak, ignored, indifferent, boring, or a pushover,” according to the book. “Humility must include confidence, ambition, and willpower.”

That’s why we’ve chosen to define humility as “putting others first by giving up what you think you deserve.” That’s a scenario every kid can imagine. And it comes right out of the Bible: Don’t do anything only to get ahead. Don’t do it because you are proud. Instead, be humble. Value others more than yourselves. (Philippians 2:3, NIV).

Coach Wooden described it this way: “Don’t try to be better than someone else. Always try to be the best you can be.”

For more blog posts and parenting resources, visit:
ParentCue.org

HUMILITY WINS

By Mike Jeffries

Anyone who ever played for UCLA Basketball Coach John Wooden, one of the greatest coaches of all time, knew that he was more about building character than he was about winning basketball games—although he did both pretty well. His teams won ten championships during a 12-year period, the final one in his last year of coaching in 1975.

He was famous for his “pyramid of success,” fifteen different elements like “competitive greatness” and “teambwork.” But Wooden said one quality was more important than all the rest and made the rest possible: unselfish humility. Wooden would tell his players: “Talent is God-given. Be humble. Fame is man-given. Be grateful. Conceit is self-given. Be careful.”

Be humble. Be grateful. Be careful. Sounds like he had the balance between ego and humility down pretty well.

David Marcum and Steven Smith, in their book Egonomics, echo Wooden’s sentiment that unselfish humility is the foundational quality for every other step to success. In their book they state, “As a trait, humility is the point of equilibrium between too much ego and not enough.” It’s the proper tension between a discouragingly low self-esteem and exceedingly high self-confidence.

In a book written for the business world, they make a good point: “As an indispensable trait of great leadership, humility must make its way past the pulpit of Sunday sermons and into the cubicles and boardrooms. Humility should be our first reflex.”

Of course, on our children’s playgrounds, humility looks a lot different than it does in a workplace, a church, or even a college basketball court. As we explore this idea of humility with our kids, we show them humility doesn’t mean getting stepped on or kicked around, or looking down on themselves. “Humility is not the equivalent of being weak, ignored, indifferent, boring, or a pushover,” according to the book. “Humility must include confidence, ambition, and willpower.”

That’s why we’ve chosen to define humility as “putting others first by giving up what you think you deserve.” That’s a scenario every kid can imagine. And it comes right out of the Bible: Don’t do anything only to get ahead. Don’t do it because you are proud. Instead, be humble. Value others more than yourselves. (Philippians 2:3, NIV).

Coach Wooden described it this way: “Don’t try to be better than someone else. Always try to be the best you can be.”

For more blog posts and parenting resources, visit:
ParentCue.org